About AUB

The Andrásy University Budapest (AUB) is the only university outside of the German-speaking world that operates entirely in German. The AUB was established as a multinational joint venture in 2001 in the wake of the Eastern enlargement of the European Union. The AUB is a Hungarian but also an international university which is supported by Hungary, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Republic of Austria, the Free State of Bavaria, the Federal State of Baden-Württemberg, the Swiss Confederation and the Autonomous Region of Trentino South Tyrol. The university was rewarded the "University of National Excellence" award in Hungary and is accredited in Hungary (MAB) as well as in Germany (evalag).

Studying @ AUB

AUB students and professors come from over 20 countries. This diverse student body and faculty creates unique and enriching study conditions. AUB admits excellent, graduate German-speaking students from all over the world, especially from Europe. AUB offers Master programs and a Ph.D. program with a 1:7 student-faculty ratio. In these programs, education is closely connected to research by involving students in research projects, field studies and offering numerous possibilities for internships.

Interdisciplinarity is key to AUB's mission; it is ensured by interdisciplinary study programs; implemented methodically into joint transdisciplinary courses; and embedded academically in overlapping research topics. European topics, including those regarding European integration, with a special focus on the Central and Eastern European countries and the Danube region lie at the forefront of research and teaching. Students at the AUB do not only gain proficiency in analyzing various aspects of European integration, but they also experience European diversity in their small international study teams. These subject areas, the ingrained interdisciplinarity and interculturality help the AUB to reach its ultimate goal of fostering cooperation between countries in the broader region and in Europe as well. Thanks to the close connection of outstanding research, competitive and innovative study programs and excellent student mentoring, AUB is able to ensure very high employability of its alumni, which are sought after as outstanding potential employees in the job market.

Research @ AUB

AUB's research focuses on European Integration and Central and Eastern Europe with special regard to the region's political, economic, legal, and historical-cultural issues and their effects on European Integration.
